

Scissero GPT

Legal research

Giving legal advice is, and always will remain, the core competence of human lawyers. But computers can help with the legal research that is necessary to formulate sound advice.

Scissero GPT is not intended to replace other types of legal research tools. Rather, it is designed to provide quick, targeted answers to specific legal questions that can serve as starting points for further research. This can be a useful supplement to other types of legal research tools, such as databases of case law or statutes, which may provide more in-depth information but may not always be as user-friendly for quickly finding specific answers to specific questions.
